THE Book Mark

If you are going to give books at Christmas time—and they are the ideal gift—may we suggest that you give a book that has something more than a temporary interest. Try to select a book of permanent value that will find a place on the bookshelves.

Instead of individual gifts to a household, why not give a book that the entire family can enjoy. The ideal book for this purpose is Audubon's "America," by Donald Culross Peattie. The 17 full color plates that come with the purchase of the book are worth the price of the book itself. "Treasury of the World's Great Letters," edited by M. Lincoln Schuster is another book suitable for a household. It contains letters for every mood and from a varied assortment of people from Alexander the Great to Thomas Mann. An old classic in a new dress would be acceptable. Macmillan's have brought out a beautiful edition of Thomas Hardy's "Under the Greenwood Tree," illustrated with the famous Clare Leighton wood engravings.

If your friends are from Illinois why not present them with "The Illinois,"—eleventh in the rivers of America series—by James Gray. If they are from Iowa, they will be sure to enjoy Phil Strong's memories of his boyhood days in Iowa, "If School Keeps." Missourians will have a grand time with Mary Margaret McBride's new book "How Dear To My Heart," in which the famous columnist of the air recalls the scenes of her childhood on a Missouri farm.

And one more book for a whole family to enjoy—"Mark Twain in Exile," prepared by Bernard DeVoto who is preparing the unpublished works of Mark Twain for publication. This is the first volume to appear. As the title implies, these are pieces in which Mark Twain speaks his mind to some of his contemporaries. It should make good reading.

This is the first holiday season in a long time in which you buy two novels for men that you can be almost positive they will really enjoy. One is Ernest Hemingway's "For Whom the Bell Tolls." We might modify the word "enjoy" in connection with this book. It is a powerful novel of Spain, a long book but the action passes in three days. The other novel is by Kenneth Roberts who wrote that recent best seller "Northwest Passage." This new book is called "Oliver Wiswell," and its setting is the American Revolution.

For any woman from eighteen to eighty who "knows" books, you will make no mistake by giving her the new Willa Cather novel, "Sapphira and the Slave Girl." The scene of the novel is Virginia, the time pre-civil war days, the theme, the attitude toward slavery. This may sound like an old dead issue but rest assured that Willa Cather will put new meaning into it. It will be out the first part of December.

For the women on your list who are not exactly literary but who read better than average books—buy Sir Hugh Walpole's "The Bright Pavillion." It belongs to Walpole's famous Herries series—the setting is Elizabethan England. Another book, not a novel, that makes very pleasant stimulating reading is "The Little Critic," by the beloved Chinese writer, Lin Yutang. You may be interested to know that he and his family are living in Pasadena after a hectic summer, spent most of the time in dugouts, at Chungking.

The array of children's books this season is so tempting you can scarcely choose a few, you want a carload. Among books with a foreign background, may we suggest for boys from 8 to 12 "Mario and the Chuma," by Esther G. Hall. It is the story of a 12 year old Argentine boy and his pet, that strange bird, the chuma. For boys and girls from 8 to 13, a good choice is "The Keepers of Elephant Valley," by Reginald Campbell. It is the story of an elephant farm in Siam. The capture of a rare white elephant is one of the highlights of the book.

For boys and girls from 12 to 16 no better choice could be made than "River Boy," the story of Mark Twain, by Isabel Proudfoot. This tells about Sam's youth in

PLACERVILLE, LAKE VALLEY AIR FIELD SITES APPROVED BY STATE PLANNING BOARD

Development Is Recommended In Report Prepared At Request Of Civil Aeronautics Authority; 138 Airports In State Included In Program

SACRAMENTO, (UP)—The state planning board today recommended public ownership and improvement of 138 airports throughout the state in a program designed to meet the requirements of transport, commercial and private flying for the next five years.

The recommendations were contained in a preliminary draft of a master plan for airports and airways in California, prepared by the board at the request of the Civil Aeronautics Authority.

When finally completed, the survey is expected to influence the allocation of public funds available for airport development, it was explained by Prof. Samuel C. May of the University of California, chairman of the planning board.

He said that if the board's program were adopted in full, every important city in California would be served conveniently by regularly scheduled transport airlines. New services would connect San Diego with the east, San Francisco with Eureka, Los Angeles with El Centro, and the major cities of the central valley with both Los Angeles and San Francisco.

Class 4 airports, defined as those capable of accommodating the largest transport planes, were recommended for Oakland, San Diego and San Francisco. The present airports at Oakland and San Diego were rated as class 2, adequate for only small transport and large commercial and private planes, while San Francisco's Mills Field was rated as class 3, suitable for medium-sized transport planes.

Class 3 airports were proposed for Bakersfield, Berkeley, El Centro, Fresno, Red Bluff, Sacramento, San

Mr. Edelman was a native of Delaware, Ohio, and came to California in 1903, residing for a time at Folsom and moving to Placerville about 1906. Until advancing years brought his retirement, he had been employed as a stone mason and in the lumbering industry in Placerville and vicinity.

The deceased is survived by his wife, Mrs. Bertha Gruben Edelman, and by four children, Ed, of San Jose; Bernice and Suzanne, of Oakland; and Mrs. Mary Dixon, of this city. The arrangements have been concluded with the assistance of Memory Chapel.

MRS. BERTHA E. TAYLOR CALLED BY DEATH AT SAN FRANCISCO

Funeral services will be held Saturday at 2 o'clock from the Halsted mortuary chapel at San Francisco for Mrs. Bertha E. Taylor, who passed away on Wednesday following an illness of several weeks.

Mrs. Taylor was a native of Folsom, eldest daughter of the late Philip and Elizabeth Engesser, and came to Placerville as a child. She attended the local schools and following her marriage moved to San Francisco.

She was the mother of James Fisk, of Rescue; Margaret Peckham, of Modesto; and Judson, Charles and Philip Taylor.

In addition, she is survived by three sisters, all of Placerville, who are Mrs. Olga Zlomke, Mrs. Alvina MacIn and Mrs. Clara Davis.

TEACHER BRIDE OF MERCHANT

Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Coleman Wed Thanksgiving Morn In Service At Reno

Mr. and Mrs. William Richard Coleman will be at their home, 20 Garden Street, after a short wedding trip following their marriage Thanksgiving morning at Reno, Nevada, in a service performed by the Rev. Sempey, of the Baptist Church. It was a double ring ceremony. Mr. Coleman's ring being a Masoc ring which had been worn by the bride's father.

Mrs. Coleman is the former Kathleen Sands Richardson, daughter of Mrs. Clifton Page Richardson, of Oakland, and has been a member of the faculty at Placerville Grammar school for four years past. Prior to that, she taught at Greenwood and at Garden Valley and has been active for several years as a member of the Order of Eastern Star and of the Native Daughters in Placerville and at Georgetown.

Her husband is a local merchant, being employed at the Furniture Exchange, and has been active in community affairs the past two years.

The couple were attended by Mr. and Mrs. H. E. Hunsaker, nephew and niece of Mr. Coleman; Jimmy Hunsaker and Mr. and Mrs. V. E. Donaldson, of Reno, intimate friends of the bride.

In keeping with the old adage of "something old, something new, something borrowed and something blue," the bride was given by her friend Miss Ruth Ann Henson, a silk handkerchief which had been a keepsake for many years; she wore a bracelet given by Mr. Coleman; from her friend, Georgie Brieger, she borrowed a gold necklace; and her amethyst U. C. graduation ring supplied the blue.

The bride was charming in a soldier blue suit with matching accessories which included, in her pocket, her mother's wedding handkerchief. Her wedding corsage was of talisman roses.

We join the many other friends of Mr. and Mrs. Coleman in the chorus of good wishes.

UNION OPENS NEW STATION

Main And Cedar Ravine Unit Has Ralph Juvenal As Station Manager

El Dorado County motorists are being invited by the Union Oil Company to make use of the facilities of their new gasoline and oil service station, opened this week on Main Street near Cedar Ravine, adjoining the Ivy Motel.

According to Agent Pete Garrick, the new station is under the management of Ralph L. Juvenal and is complete in every detail to insure complete automobile service to its patrons.

The station has been erected during the past month on property leased from John A. Raffetto, Jr., and the oil company in its building plans co-operated with Mr. Raffetto and with the city government in arrangements for setting back the property line to make possible a widening of Main Street at that point.

Establishment of the station gives the Union Oil Company two retail service stations in the downtown community, the first having been in operation for several years at the junction of Main and Charles Streets.

WAR DEPARTMENT WANTS TO EQUIP ARMY OF THREE TO FOUR MILLION

WASHINGTON — (UP) — War department officials, it was learned today, will ask the next congress for an additional $5,000,000,000 to equip an army of 3,000,000 men if such a force is deemed necessary to defend the Western hemisphere.

Authoritative sources said approximately $8,000,000,000 would be required, but that $3,000,000,000 of the $8,792,000,000 provided for the army during the current congressional session still remains unexpended.

The army hopes to have 2,000,000 men under arms by June 30, 1942. Gen. George C. Marshall, Chief of Staff, has estimated that between 3,000,000 and 4,000,000 men might be necessary in event of a major war in the western hemisphere.

The proposed $5,000,000,000 request, plus unexpended funds, would fully equip a 2,000,000 man army and would leave a backlog for an additional 1,000,000 men if it were found necessary to call them. Such a fund also would meet all expenditures arising from the selective service law under which 900,000 men will be given military training next year.

A certificate of record at the courthouse Friday tells of the birth of a son, Maurice Duane Veerkamp, Jr., to Mr. and Mrs. Maurice Veerkamp, of Gold Hill, at Placerville Sanatorium on November 14.

Rossi Home Hit By Fire

Two-Story Myrtle Avenue Residence Apartment Scene Of Thursday Night Blaze

The two-story frame residence-apartment of Mrs. Geneva Rossi, on Myrtle Avenue, was severely damaged by a fire Thursday night in which the fortunate absence of wind and efficient work by the firemen combined to prevent a more serious conflagration.

As it was, the upper portion of the place was virtually gutted, the roof was badly burned and there was some damage to the lower floor.

It was reported that the fire resulted from an attempt to remove from the second story of the structure a portable oil heater which was not functioning properly.

Near-witnesses reported that Mrs. Maude Lawyer, Mrs. Rossi's mother, had become alarmed at the way the heater was burning and sought to take it from the building. As she dug it down the stairway, some fuel spilled along the stairs and on nearing the floor she sought to throw it through the front door.

When the heater landed inside the house, Dr. M. E. Howland, a tenant, contrived to drag it into the yard and, upon returning to the house, found that a fire all ready too great for him to control, had been started on the stairway and was burning briskly.

Mrs. Lawyer gained safety as did Orew Rossi, her grandson, who was ill with a severe cold and escaped the burning building through a rear window.

Mrs. Rossi and her daughter had been on a vacation trip in the southern part of the state and returned home late Thursday night or early Friday morning.

P. O. Robbery Suspect Returned From L. A.

The sheriff was expecting to interrogate De Buse Friday concerning details of his purported confession to the robbery.

E. J. Robinson and Mrs. Viola Robinson were here from Oroville to spend Thanksgiving Day with the Don and Dean Robinson families.

"ROULETTE of LOVE" by MAY CHRISTIE

SYNOPSIS

Ten days after beautiful Lucinda Stanford's meeting with wealthy Carter Chalmers, he confesses his love for her. However, socially prominent Zita Van Vorst has her cap set for Carter with the approval of his mother. Lucinda is happy in the thought that Carter wants to marry her but her heart sinks when, in reply to the question as to what his mother will say, he replies: "Mother needn't know a thing about it. What's it got to do with my family?" Then, one night, Carter does not appear. The next evening, Lucinda learns from Bubbles, her god-sister, that Carter is to marry Zita. The same night, Carter calls but says nothing of his engagement although he speaks of the futility of life and how when one really begins to learn what happiness means something bobs up to spoil it. Carter induces Lucinda to go to Lake Mahopac for the week-end. As a result, she loses her position as an advertisement writer, but secures another as hostess at a fashionable gambling establishment. One evening, Carter visits the club while intoxicated and loses $20,000. Later, he hears the proprietor tell Lucinda that her commission on the loss is $400. Although she is innocent, Carter believes Lucinda framed him and breaks with her. His engagement to Zita is announced.

CHAPTER XI

It was a beautiful wedding at the Church of the Heavenly Rest. Zita Van Vorst—now Zita Chalmers—made a stunning looking bride. The paper raved about her.

Carter looked very serious, but extraordinarily handsome, too, in the wedding pictures.

With a veil over her face, Lucinda—heart-broken but irresistibly drawn to the spot, in the same manner that one bit on an aching tooth—from the sidewalk saw the guests go in and out of the church, and the bride and groom.

It was like a terrible dream to her. She moved like an automaton. Bubbles had sympathized with Lucinda, perhaps at heart a little remorseful that she had indirectly been a cause in the rift between the lovers, since—through her acquaintance with Cambericas—Lucinda had got a job in the gambling-house. "Tough luck, baby! That's life! What is to be, is to be." That, and other platitudes, did nothing to ameliorate the situation. Lucinda remained distraught and wretched.

Bubbles became impatient. "I'd show a little pride, if I were you. I wouldn't let any man my life, least of all that poppin'jay! Mother's darling boy!" she mimicked. "I'll bet that stuck-up cat of a Zita will make him stop! She'll lead him a dance, if I'm not mistaken—and serve him right too!"

The financial situation went from bad to worse, for the two sisters, Cambericas, furious that Carter's father had notified the bank to stop payment on the boy's gambling checks for $20,000 (which was perfectly in order, since gambling is illegal) refused to do anything further for Bubbles.

"And everyone else I know is as broke as we are ourselves!" Bubbles wailed. "If you'd an inch of spirit, Lucinda, instead of moping around, you'd bring a breach-of-promise action against Carter! You bet his old man would have to shell out to stop the scandal!"

But Lucinda turned a deaf ear to her sister's suggestions.

Bubbles became so irritable and restless that the little flat became a doubly miserable abode.

It was not a great shock to Lucinda—although she was terribly concerned for her sister's future—to find, one evening when she returned from a fruitless search for work, Bubbles' clothes gone from the apartment, and a scribbled note lying on the table.

"I'm off with X. Shall be gone a couple of months any way. I hope longer. The boat will be going down the bay as you read this, so don't rush to the dock, for it will be too late to stop me. X—promises me a swell time. I borrowed your fitted suitcase. Good luck. Stop moping, and follow my example."

"Bubbles."

Three days later, Lucinda got a job as salesgirl in the basement of a large, cheap store.

The August days were blazing. Lucinda suffered from the appalling heat, although she seldom saw the sun. The work was almost beyond her strength, yet she was glad to have it, not only because it provided a meagre living for her, but because there was no time to brood on Carter.

One day Bertie Sprigg, the indigent Englishman to whom any form of work was anathema, dropped into the store to see her, and—wonders of wonders!—even bought an iced drink for her at the soda-fountain! This was the first time that Lucinda had ever known him to spend a nickel on anybody but himself!

"I say, the fair Zita isn't turning out exactly what you'd call a jolly old home-bird... I mean, she rather declines to decorate the domestic pretty wonky, has given them to her daughter-in-law in custody. Or so the report goes. By the way, they're living in a gorgeous Park Avenue apartment! Zita selected all the furniture herself. I understand that when they got back from the honeymoon, there was a deuce of a row over the bills!"

Going home on the Elevated that night, Lucinda was shocked to read of the sudden death of Mrs. Chalmers Senior, from heart failure.

When she arrived at her solitary little apartment, to her surprise she found Bertie Sprigg on the doorstep, waiting for her.

He, too, had an evening paper. He had come to expatiate on this news-item, and was disappointed hearth! I was in the 'Merry-Go-Round' yesterday—that adorable speak where the jolly old bar revolves like a spinning top—Zita was spinning around with a good-looking Argentine dancer—I call it a bit thick on young Carter!"

Bubbles went off with X—leaving a note for Lucinda.

"Was he there too?" Lucinda forced herself to ask, through dry lips.

"Not at all. He's working hard downtown. Rumor has it that the bally old firm is a bit rocky."

"But his father is a millionaire—"

"I say, that doesn't mean a thing these days! What with the jolly old market bouncing up and down, it's here today and gone tomorrow!"

Ensued a pause. Then Lucinda asked, shyly: "Bertie, do you ever see Carter?"

"I saw him at the Embassy Club directly after they returned from their honeymoon. They were only away ten days, you know. They went on his yacht, and Zita got seasick, or sick of the sea, or maybe—hawl! hawl! hawl!—sick of Carter!"

"Did—did he seem happy, Bertie?" Oh, this was terribly undignified, this questioning—but she must know.

"He was tight as a lord, my dear! As-tight-as-a-lot! Rather indiscreet for a bridegroom in his first public appearance after the jolly old honeymoon! But I understand it wasn't so jolly as one might think. What ho!"

"You mean—they aren't getting along as well as they might? Is that it, Bertie?"

"I mean, the fair Zita is a bit of a hell-cat! Haven't met her myself, but I know several of her so-called friends. By the way, she was hung like a plump horse with the Chalmers family jewels! It seems that Mrs. Chalmers Senior, whose health is that already Lucinda had read it. "After I left you today, I dropped in for a jolly old game of pool at the Yale Club," he announced, sinking on Lucinda's couch in the living-room and elegantly draping his long legs over the rear end. "There was a chap there who'd been dining at the Chalmers' place at Hewlett last night, just before the poor old lady kicked the bucket."

Lucinda murmured: "Oh, Bertie, you use such dreadful expressions—"

"But apt, my dear child—apt," said Bertie, lighting his pipe and warming to his theme. "Now this chap at the Yale Club is young—but quite a financier. The Chalmers, père et fils, were evidently seeking his advice or help in some manner. Zita was there too. But when it came to the nuts and port, she wisely left them to it, and vamoosed upstairs to her mother-in-law. She wasn't as tactful there as she'd been below, it seems. In fact, she started an awful argument with the old lady."

"What happened?" breathed Lucinda.

"Well, the old lady telephoned from her bedside to have both her husband and her son come up at once. I heard this chap saying so. Zita had started some row, and was right in the middle of it when they arrived. It seems the old lady had been moved into a room directly over the dining-room, and this chap could hear the back-wash of a complete shindy, and the four of them going at it, hammer and tongs!"

"And—and she died directly after?"

"Right in the middle of it—from heart failure," Bertie said succinctly.

HIGHLIGHTS ON THE SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON.

By NEWMAN CAMPBELL
(The International Uniform Lesson for Nov. 24 is Luke 8, the Golden Text being Luke 8:18, "Take heed therefore how ye hear.")

THE CHAPTER of St. Luke which comprises today's lesson is one of the most charming pictures of the life of our Lord on earth. It mentions three women who believed in the Lord and ministered to Him. Mary Magdalene had been cured of evil spirits by Him; Joanna was the wife of Chuzas, steward or chamberlain of Herod Antipas, and Susanna, who is not mentioned anywhere else in the New Testament. All three were faithful followers who aided the Lord in His great work.

A great multitude was following Jesus, and He told them a parable of a sower who scattered grain. Some of the grains fell on to hard, barren ground, and almost at once birds flew down and ate them for food; others fell on stony ground that gave no moisture, and when the seeds came up they quickly withered. Still others fell in ground that allowed them to sprout and grow, but thorns grew also, and choked the good grain. Others fell into good ground and grew up and made a good harvest. As He told the parable He cried, "He that hath ears to hear, let him hear."

The disciples wanted to know the meaning of this parable, and Jesus explained that the seed was the word of God which was heard by many people. Some hearts were hard and the word made no impression on them. It was as if birds flew down and plucked the words and ate them. Others' hearts were stony, and while the good words might be sown in them, they soon were forgotten because the minds of those who received were not interested and gave them no thought in which to grow.

Others heard and believed at first, but allowed other interests, like weeds, to choke out all thought of them. But there were many whose minds and hearts welcomed the fruitful thoughts and cherished them, and gathered a rich harvest of fine Christian living from them.

Storm on Galilee

The Sea of Galilee is a beautiful body of water 350 feet below sea level. It is usually calm, but sudden storms arise on it. After teaching the people, Jesus and His disciples embarked in a boat to go to the other side of the sea. Jesus, being weary, went to sleep, and a great storm arose, which rocked the boat and frightened the fishermen so that they called Jesus, telling Him that they OKLAHOMA CITY, (UP) — Maybe the man talks the way he does because this is the part of the country where you never hear a discouraging word, but whatever the reason Tom Stidham likes to defend football officials.

Stidham's word is not without weight, either. In the first place, he is bigger than any of the Oklahoma footballers he coaches, and that is saying plenty, because you'll never miss the buffaloes as long as you can visit nearby Norman and take a look at the Sooner squad. In fact, one of the rules governing alumni recruiting in this section is that all prospects under six feet and weighing less than 200 be thrown back as undersized.

In the second place, Stidham's vote of confidence in officials really means something because he has been around football as a player and as a coach for nigh on to 20 years, and in that length of time a fellow is bound to run the gamut of officials from wheezy old gentlemen who wouldn't know a flanker from a chicken coop, to bright young men who blow their whistles just to call attention to themselves.

And, thirdly, Stidham is one of the best coaches in the country and knows a good official when he sees one.

"You know," Big Tom said as he watched his team work out for the Saturday game with Temple, "you know, that mistake by Freisell in the Dartmouth-Cornell game, and the one Johnny Getchell made in a Notre Game with Carnegie a year or two ago, were given too much publicity. The public is liable to start thinking that the officials are not competent and that would be a whacking mistake."

"They are an amazing group of men. Honest, sincere, hard-working and unbelievably efficient. I say unbelievably efficient because there isn't a game in the world that puts such a burden on its officials as does football. In the first place, 22 players are involved with each snap of the ball. That means 44 possible violations of the rule, because there isn't a play that doesn't afford each one of the players an opportunity to do something illegal. That means a lot for an official to watch. Sure I've seen them make them and so have others. But who doesn't make mistakes? I make them, you make them and so does everybody else. The wonder to me is that officials call games as accurately as they do."

Stidham has no patience with those critics who, in a projection room on Monday, put the referee and other officials to a test with the motion pictures of the game.

"There never was an ordinary mortal with a camera eye," Stidham points out, "you don't tell me a human being is supposed to see all the things a camera does. I'm telling you that until someone invents a robot official—a creation of steel and gadgets who sees all, knows all, and can make split second decisions without chance of error, we'd better stick by the officials we have and be grateful for them."

In the Big Six Conference, Stidham explained, everything possible is done to guarantee competent officials.

In September, the eligible officials meet with the commissioner in Kansas City. They are put through physical tests to determine their fitness to keep up with the play. They are drilled in the mechanics of the game, and then given a written examination covering all the standard football situations plus a dozen or more trying ones that might come up. They are then given grades and the ranking ones get the assignments.

THE FILM VERSION of the musical farce, "Boys from Syracuse," topping the Friday-Saturday bill at the Empire, features Martha Raye and Joe Penner. On the same program is "Wildcat Bus" with Fay Wray. The two-day program is followed Sunday by "The Return of Frank James," featuring Henry Fonda.

If any coach would care to attack officials just let him drop me a line and this department of sweetness and light will be turned over to him.

COLOMA NOTES

Mrs. Annie Jaeger and Miss Mamie Thomas were out from Placerville Monday visiting friends and relatives.

Mr. and Mrs. V. Geiger of Placerville visited Mrs. S. Cummings on Wednesday.

Harry Miller and party of Pollock Pines visited Coloma Sunday on their way home from a Feather River fishing excursion leaving a fine salmon with their friends, the Groat family.

Mr. and Mrs. Johnnie Brown of Lotus have a little daughter, Karen Sue, born last Thursday. The mother is a sister of Mrs. Spoon of Coloma.

Mrs. Tillie Conroy entered a Placerville hospital Tuesday for a course of treatments in the hopes she will regain her health.

William Metcalf from the southern part of the state visited his daughter, Mrs. Wm. Staggs over the weekend.

Mrs. Hattie Carpenter, guest at the home of Mrs. Angie DeLory the past few weeks, left for San Jose last Friday to spend Thanksgiving with her daughter, Mrs. Ben Painter and family.

George Geogline is employed by the mining concern now testing the Robert Veerkamp property near Garden Valley, driving back and forth to work each day.

Mrs. Sarah Cummings and son Jack visited San Francisco and Sacramento on business last week.

Edward Powell, maintenance man covering several counties for the "A" was busy here Tuesday resetting signs torn up Halloween night. One was fished out of the river, another rested on top of a garage, and several in early fields. We understand some of the boys responsible for many of the rather silly tricks came out from Placerville. One thoughtless and cruel prank was the unhooking of a large wire gate and placing it across the front entrance to the home of a lady practically blind. Fortunately she had no occasion to leave her home until the gate was discovered and removed the following day.

Hector Williamson of Springvale visited Coloma friends Saturday treating them to bear meat. We are told the black bear was a fine specimen and weighed in the neighborhood of 400 pounds. He was caught in a trap, the first night escaping but was not so lucky the second night. Williamson and his youthful helpers have been in the vicinity of Loon Lake making preparations to build a bridge there in the early spring.

Jack Cummings and Sam Veerkamp were pheasant hunting the opening day in Butte county and brought home the limit. Many hunters are busy out shooting quail here and report good luck.

Mr. and Mrs. Otto A. Case and the former's sister, Mrs. F. H. Copermoll of Washington state spent sometime sight-seeing around Coloma Tuesday. Mr. Case was a successful democratic candidate for reelection to the office of state treasurer and the party greatly enjoyed their visit here.

Mr. and Mrs. Newton Grout were in El Dorado on business Friday.

Mrs. Stephen Ruthman was taken to the Placerville sanatorium Tuesday evening suffering from attack of appendicitis. At present the lady is feeling much better.

Col. E. A. Wiltsee, U. S. Army, and Wayne L. Hess, of the Pacific Union Club, San Francisco, were busy taking pictures of historic interest here Tuesday.
